JOHN CLARKE CNZM
Tiamana o te Kaunihera Tuku Iho Māori
Chair Māori Heritage Council

This mihi is a greeting to the people, marae, rūnanga and guardians of our Māori Heritage throughout Aotearoa New Zealand. It acknowledges the contribution and passing of four members of the Māori Heritage Council. These fine gentlemen were instrumental in the development of this vision called Tapuwae.

E kore e mōnehunehu te pūmahara ki ngā momo rangatira o neherā, nā rātou nei i toro te nukuroa o Te Moananui-a-Kiwa me Papatūānuku. Ko ngā tohu a ō rātou tapuwae i kākahutia ki runga i te mata o te whenua — he taonga, he tapu.

Time will not dim the memory of the special class of rangatira of the past who braved the wide expanse of the ocean and land. Their sacred footprints are scattered over the surface of the land, treasured and sacred.

Tīmatanga Introduction

Ki te reo Pākehā ‘ko sacred footprint’ te ingoa mō te tapuwae; ka whakamahia e te Kaunihera Māori te kupu nei hei tohu mō ngā tapuwae kua mau ki te whenua nei. E whakamahia anō hoki te kupu nei, hei whakatō i te whakaaro, inā titiro whakamuri tātou, ka kite tātou i ngā wāhi i reira tātou i a tātou e whatinga whakamua anō.

Ka whakapuakina e te kupu Tapuwae ngā moemoeā me ngā tūmanako mō te pouhere Māori. Ka taea te whakatinana ngā moemoeā nei, ā, he kaupapa whai kiko hoki tēnei, e tauawhitia ana e ngā take kaitiakitanga, ā, kua pānuitia hoki ēnei e ngā ture o te motu me ngā take rangapū o te motu. Ko te Pouhere Taonga o Aotearoa ko te Pouhere Taonga Māori.

E tāpae atu ana te Heritage New Zealand Pouhere Taonga i te kaupapa o Tapuwae hei koha āwhina i te kaupapa whakatipu i a Aotearoa hei whenua mō ngā momo iwi katoa, me tā rātou tū whakahī hoki i raro i tōna maru, me ngā tikanga taketake me te tino wāriu o aua tikanga taketake.

Tapuwae means ‘sacred footprint’. The Māori Heritage Council uses this term to symbolise the Māori heritage ‘footprints’ in the landscape. It is also used to communicate the idea that we can look back to where we have been as we move forward, taking more steps.

Tapuwae articulates a vision for Māori heritage. This is a practical, pragmatic vision grounded in kaitiakitanga and informed by the nation’s legal and political environment.

Māori heritage is New Zealand’s heritage. Heritage New Zealand Pouhere Taonga offers Tapuwae as a contribution to New Zealand’s developing sense of nationhood that takes pride in its indigenous heritage and associated value systems.

He aha te Pouhere Taonga Māori?

What is Māori heritage?

Anei ngā whakamārama a Tā Apirana:

He taonga tuku iho, he taonga pūmau.

Ko ngā tikanga whai hua o tō tātou Māoritanga.

Ko ngā mea nō konei, nō tēnei whenua kura

He taonga tuku iho ki ā tātou tamariki.

Ko te ngako o te motuhake o Aotearoa i ētahi atu whenua ko te pouhere taonga Māori. Ko te pouhere taonga Māori te mātāmua o ngā pouhere taonga katoa o Aotearoa. He tino nui ngā painga ka puta mai i te ringa; mai i ngā tapuwae o ngā iwi me te noho a ngā hapū i raro i te maru o ā rātou tikanga; mai i tā rātou taenga mai ki Aotearoa i ngā tau 800 kua hipa atu nei. I pā tēnei āhuatanga ki ngā tāngata o ngā tōpito katoa o te motu.

I whakatōkia ki roto i te Pouhere Taonga Māori te mana me te wairua mutunga kore mai i tēnā whakatipuranga, ki tēnā whakatipuranga. Mā ngā whakawhānaungatanga i waenganui i ngā iwi me ō rātou wāhi kāinga, e pūmau ai te ora o ēnei taonga tuku iho.

Ko te mana o ngā wāhi e kī a ko te Pouhere Taonga Māori kei ngā mana whakapuaki kōrero, kei ngā mana whakapakari, whakarerekē rānei i te mana e pā ana ki ngā hītori, ki ngā kaupapa, me ngā tikanga, tae atu hoki ki te mana whakaīngoa ko wai ngā whānau, ngā hapū, me ngā iwi.

He taonga katoa ēnei, ā, kei tēnā tonu tōna ake mana me tōna ake mauri, ā, kia kore rawa ai e ngaro ngā taonga nei mā te tauwhi i ngā kaupapa kaitiaki, mā te tauawhi rānei i ngā tikanga kaitiaki a te Māori, ko ngā here me ngā pīkauranga o tēnei mea ko te kaitiakitanga he taonga tuku iho ki ngā tāngata e whai whakapapa ana i ō rātou ake iwi, me ō rātou tīpuna hoki.

Kei raro i te karangatanga pouhere taonga ko ētahi o ēnei, arā, ko ngā wāhi tapu, ko ngā wāhi whai hītori, ko ngā nohonga o ngā tīpuna, ko ngā tohu whenua o ia iwi, ko ngā whenua kei reira e putu ana ngā kaupapa tikanga o mua; tae atu hoki ki ngā taonga i hanga pērā me ngā marae, ngā whare karakia me ērā momo whare; tae atu ki ngā tohu whakamaumaharatanga hoki.

Ko ngā momo hītori me ngā mea e whakahaeretia ana ki ēnei wāhi ronganui me kī, he mahi kua mahia, ā, e

Sir Apirana Ngata offered the following statement about Māori heritage:

A heirloom, a treasure of true value.

These are the significant aspects of our Māoritanga.

They are the treasures from here, of this treasured land,

An ancestral treasure to pass on to our children.

Māori heritage is central to New Zealand's unique identity. It is New Zealand's earliest heritage. The 'footprint' of iwi and hapū life and culture since the first arrivals in Aotearoa some 800 years ago, it is substantial and touches all parts of our country.

Māori heritage is imbued with mana and spirituality that endure through generations. It lives on through relationships of people and place.

Māori heritage places give meaning and prestige to the history, traditions, culture and identity of whānau, hapū and iwi. They are taonga, each with their own mana and mauri, to be maintained and cared for under the obligations that stem from kaitiakitanga, or Māori cultural guardianship. Kaitiakitanga responsibilities and obligations descend to tribal members according to whakapapa and ancestral association.

Heritage places include sacred and historic sites, ancestral places, tribal landmarks, cultural landscapes, and built heritage features such as marae and church buildings, structures and monuments.

mahia ana tonutia mai rā noa. Mā ngā wāhi pouhere taonga nei, ka mōhiotia ngā kōrero o tēnā wāhi o tēnā wāhi, ka mārama hoki te mōhio noa ki te wāriu o ngā tikanga o ngā iwi o taua wāhi, me ō rātou whakaaro mō tō rātou ao whānui. Kāre te mātauranga Māori e noho whāiti noa ki ngā wāhi e kitea ana, e pā atu ana rānei te ringa. Ko ngā momo hītori me ngā momo whakahaere e mahia ana i reira ko ngā wāhi tapu, ko ngā whenua rongonui ōna kōrero, ko ngā wāhi tīpuna, ko ngā tohu whenua o tēnā iwi, o tēnā iwi, ko ngā wāhi rongonui mō ngā āhuatanga o te tikanga, ā, nō muri mai ko ngā pouhere pūmau pērā i ngā marae, ngā whare karakia me ērā atu momo taonga tae atu ki ngā taonga whakamaumaharatanga hoki.

Ko ētahi o ngā hītori me ngā whakahaere e mahia ana ki ngā wāhi rongonui nei, me kī kua roa nei e mahia ana ki konei, kua roa noa te whānaungatanga o te kaupapa nei e haere tahi ana. Engari ka aro atu ki ngā mātauranga me ngā kōrero mō aua wāhi.

The histories and events which occurred at places of heritage significance are, in a sense, embedded in those places and in relationships with them. Heritage places are sources of identity and cultural values. Māori heritage relates not only to the physical places but also the knowledge and stories of those places.

The Treaty of Waitangi provides the foundation for Heritage New Zealand engagement with Māori communities in respect of their heritage places. As a Crown entity, Heritage New Zealand exercises its functions and powers on the basis of Treaty-based relationships with whānau, hapū and iwi. Heritage New Zealand, through the presence of the Council and the standing and involvement of Council members amongst Māori communities, has successfully forged strong relationships with whānau, hapū and iwi. This permits the activities and statutory functions of Heritage New Zealand relating to Māori heritage places to be undertaken within a relationship that is essentially a Treaty partnership.

Relationships between Heritage New Zealand and whānau, hapū and iwi are underpinned by the principles of partnership – incorporating a duty to act reasonably, honourably and in good faith, and a duty to make informed decisions – active protection, and where applicable, redress.

The role of the Council is critical to the development and maintenance of positive Heritage New Zealand relationships with iwi, hapū and whānau. These relationships are further strengthened by the ongoing activities of those Heritage New Zealand staff who work closely with Māori communities and their heritage places.

Heritage New Zealand performs a range of statutory Māori heritage-related functions with Māori communities and within Treaty-based relationships. These functions require Heritage New Zealand variously to identify and promote Māori heritage places (through the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero), regulate as a Crown function (through archaeological authority decision-making); support (through conservation services), and to assist and advocate on behalf of Māori communities particularly on Resource Management Act (RMA) related matters.

In its actions and deliberations, Heritage New Zealand is required to recognise the relationship of Māori and their culture and traditions with their ancestral lands, water, sites, wāhi tapu and other taonga. The Council considers Māori heritage places to be ‘taonga’ as expressed in Te Tiriti o Waitangi.

Heritage New Zealand Pouhere Taonga has a range of functions and powers. These include responsibilities to:

- identify, record, investigate, assess, make entries on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero
- regulate, protect, and conserve historic places, historic areas, wāhi tūpuna, wāhi tapu, and wāhi tapu areas
- provide information, advice, assistance and advocacy in relation to these places and areas.

An awareness of Māori heritage places amongst land owners, land developers and those who exercise authority over and make decisions about land development is vital for the prevention of damage to and destruction of heritage places. This need underpins Heritage New Zealand activities such as entering Māori heritage places on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero, engagement in statutory advocacy processes for the protection of cultural sites, and the preservation and conservation of significant Māori heritage buildings and structures.

The Māori Heritage Council holds that an increased awareness and appreciation of Māori heritage amongst New Zealanders leads to improved retention and protection of Māori heritage places. The Council expresses this view as follows:

Our treasures enrich our communities in a multitude of ways – socially, culturally, spiritually and economically. As we are enriched by our heritage we hold it more firmly to us. The more we hold it to us and appreciate it, the more it has the potential to further enrich our lives, and so the more firmly still we grasp and treasure it.

The Māori Heritage Council has a range of statutory functions. These include responsibilities to:

- ensure that in the protection of wāhi tūpuna, wāhi tapu, wāhi tapu areas, and historic places and historic areas of interest to Māori, Heritage New Zealand meets the needs of Māori in a culturally sensitive manner
- develop Māori programmes for the identification and conservation of wāhi tūpuna, wāhi tāpu, wāhi tapu areas, and historic places and historic areas of interest to Māori, and to inform the Board of Heritage New Zealand of all activities, needs, and developments relating to Māori interests in such areas and places
- assist Heritage New Zealand to develop and reflect a bicultural view in the exercise of its powers and functions
- develop its own iwi and other consultative and reporting processes and to recommend such processes for adoption by the Board and staff of Heritage New Zealand when dealing with matters of interest to Māori
- make recommendations about applications for archaeological authorities that relate to sites of interest to Māori referred by Heritage New Zealand
- consider and determine suitable nominations for entering wāhi tūpuna, wāhi tapu and wāhi tapu areas on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero
- propose historic places and historic areas of interest to Māori for entry on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero
- advocate the interests of Heritage New Zealand and the Council in so far as they relate to matters of Māori heritage at any public or Māori forum.

The Māori Heritage Council understands and acknowledges that Māori are kaitiaki of their heritage places and therefore works alongside Māori communities. The Council does not seek to act as kaitiaki, but is committed to recognising, supporting, and where appropriate, facilitating the kaitiakitanga of whānau, hapū and iwi. In performing its functions, the Council is required to recognise the interests of any kaitiaki engari e tautoko ana, e hāpai ana, ā, e tauawhi ana me te āwhina hoki. Ko ngā iwi, ko ngā hapū, me ngā whānau ngā kaitiaki o ū rātou kāinga tuku iho. The Māori Heritage Council also recognises and accepts what Māori communities say they want; to manage their own heritage places but with support, advice and assistance from the Council. In meeting this expectation, the Council fosters co-operative relationships with whānau, hapū and iwi.

Identifying Māori Heritage

Māori Heritage places and the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangī Kōrero

The work of the Māori Heritage Council is largely focused on the recognition and promotion of Māori land-based and built heritage. The entry of Māori heritage places on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangī Kōrero under Part 4 of the HNZPT Act is an important means of achieving this and is carried out in partnership with whānau, hapū and iwi. In its work, the Council acknowledges the mana of Māori communities in relation to their heritage places, their taonga.

Types of Māori heritage places are numerous. The Council recognises that a salient feature of Māori heritage places is ancestral association with these places. Invariably, traditional sites or places are significant to whānau, hapū or iwi because of the important events or exploits related to ancestors that occurred there or to the esteem that ancestors themselves accorded those places. Māori heritage places are therefore, in the wider sense, ‘ancestral places’ or wāhi tūpuna (wāhi tīpuna, in some dialects), many of which are also regarded as wāhi tapu or sacred places.

The distinction between wāhi tūpuna and wāhi tapu is largely one of context and the particular cultural values that predominate according to iwi or hapū custom or tradition.

The HNZPT Act provides for Māori heritage places to be entered on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero as any one of the following:

- wāhi tūpuna
- wāhi tapu
- wāhi tapu area
- historic place of interest to Māori
- historic area of interest to Māori.

Places of outstanding national heritage value can be included on the list of National Historic Landmarks/Ngā Manawhenua o Aotearoa me ūna Kōrero Tūturu. Places accepted for inclusion on the National Historic Landmarks list must be on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero. The Māori Heritage Council is consulted regarding Māori heritage places but the Minister for Arts, Culture and Heritage makes the determination to include a place on the National Historic Landmarks list after consultation with the Minister of Māori Affairs.

Wāhi Tūpuna/Wāhi Tīpuna

A wāhi tūpuna is defined as “a place important to Māori for its ancestral significance and associated cultural and traditional values”. A wāhi tūpuna will have strong traditional associations with one or more ancestors significant to an iwi or hapū, be integral to the identity or cultural well-being of the iwi or hapū, and be a distinct and cohesive place or area.

Wāhi Tapu

The definition of wāhi tapu has been widely and often fruitlessly debated. The Council applies the statutory definition of wāhi tapu together with the collective Māori cultural knowledge and experience of its members, when determining applications to enter wāhi tapu on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero.

The HNZPT Act defines wāhi tapu as “a place sacred to Māori in the traditional, spiritual, religious, ritual, or mythological sense”.

Wāhi Tapu Areas

A wāhi tapu area is land that contains one or more wāhi tapu. Wāhi tapu in close proximity to each other can be entered as a wāhi tapu area on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero as a single entry. A wāhi tapu area also provides for a variety of (often inter-related) wāhi tapu to be recognised in this way. In some cases it is difficult to determine precisely the boundary of a wāhi tapu site, so it is often helpful to identify a general area as a wāhi tapu area within which a wāhi tapu is located.

Historic Places and Historic Areas of interest to Māori

Historic places and historic areas of interest to Māori are those places where the heritage values recognised focus on historical, architectural, aesthetic, archaeological, social or other significance, rather than the ancestral or sacred aspects of Māori heritage. Applications to enter historic places and historic areas of interest to Māori on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero are referred to the Council for its recommendation but the Heritage New Zealand Board makes the final determination.

National Historic Landmarks/Ngā Manawhenua o Aotearoa me ūna Kōrero Tūturu

A place can be included on the National Historic Landmarks list having regard to its outstanding historical significance, its outstanding physical significance or its outstanding cultural significance to tangata whenua or other communities in relation to its social, spiritual, traditional, or ancestral associations.

Protecting and Conserving Māori Heritage

Archaeology and Māori heritage places

Archaeological sites, whether or not they are identified or recorded, have, in the first instance, protection under the Heritage New Zealand Pouhere Taonga Act 2014. Heritage New Zealand is empowered by the Act to exercise regulatory authority (kāwanatanga) regarding archaeological sites. It is a crime to modify or destroy an archaeological site without authority from Heritage New Zealand to do so. The archaeological authority process administered by Heritage New Zealand regulates the extent to which land development or any activity may be permitted to have an impact on archaeological sites.

Most archaeological sites in New Zealand are associated with places of Māori migration and settlement. They reflect successive patterns of land use and occupation, providing a sense of layers of history. In this regard, Heritage New Zealand, principally through the Council, maintains an inclusive approach to relationships with Māori communities associated with archaeological sites within the area of another hapū or iwi. It recognises and acknowledges the mana whenua status of hapū and iwi, in the first instance, but also needs to work with other parties who have a demonstrable association with particular archaeological sites.

Māori communities often look to archaeology to support the preservation and conservation of Māori heritage values. Authority to modify or destroy an archaeological site only can be obtained from Heritage New Zealand. An authority will be issued only if a rigorous assessment by Heritage New Zealand of the likely impact on a site determines that the scientific and/or Māori cultural values, or any other relevant values relating to the site are not significant enough to warrant declining the application.

The Council has a statutory role to consider and make recommendations to the Board of Heritage New Zealand on all authority applications to the Board for an authority to modify or destroy archaeological sites of Māori interest. The administration of the archaeological authority process by Heritage New Zealand and the Council is an area of activity that can at times seriously test their relationships with whānau, hapū and iwi. In carrying out this regulatory function, the Council, on behalf of the Board has to take account of competing values and interests. On occasion, the national interest and national priorities have to be weighed in coming to a decision on an archaeological authority application. The duties to act reasonably, honourably and in good faith, and to make informed decisions inherent in the principle of partnership, must still be applied in these circumstances.

Statutory protection of archaeological sites is important both to iwi, hapū and whānau and to the wider community in ensuring that physical evidence of human activity of the past is retained for future generations. Such places can embody the mana, mauri and wairua, of ancestors irrespective of the extent of physical evidence of their presence that survives.

Kei runga tonu i te āhua o te wāhi hurawhenua, ka taea e te wāriu o ngā tikanga Māori te whakakāhore i tētahi tono whai mana hurawhenua. Ki te hanga ōrite ngā wāriu, ā, kāore he take mō te whakakāhore, me whakaae te kaunihera ki te tono.

Ahakoa tērā, he painga tō te pūtaiao mō ngā whānau, hapū me te iwi, mā te tuku kōrero hōu mō tētahi

The Council works to ensure that knowledge of the kōrero, and matauranga Māori associated with such places sits alongside scientific assessments when heritage management decisions concerning archaeological sites are being made. Depending on the nature of any particular archaeological site, the strength of the Māori cultural values alone can be sufficient to decline an archaeological authority application. Where the strength of the values, on balance, is not considered sufficient to decline an authority application, the Council must approve the application.

The involvement of Heritage New Zealand staff and iwi and hapū with land owners/developers early in the archaeological authority consultation phase can help mitigate contention over development plans affecting archaeological sites. The Council promotes avoiding the disturbance of sites if at all possible. With goodwill this often can be achieved to the mutual benefit of all those concerned, resulting in the retention of features of a diminishing and finite heritage resource.

The science of archaeology can have major benefits for whānau, hapū and iwi by providing important new information about a site and its use and history. Some Māori communities have embraced the benefits and outcomes that archaeological processes and procedures can bring to their heritage places. Archaeological investigations of heritage sites can provide valuable scientific and other contextual information. This will enhance Māori communities'

Statutory advocacy – resource management and planning

Māori communities have an enduring legacy of environmental interaction, use and development. Utilisation of natural resources was and continues to be balanced against the obligation to ensure sustainability of resources for future generations. The importance of sustainable management of Māori land-based and built heritage is recognised by Māori communities. The Council supports this approach and applies the principles of sustainability in its decision-making on resource management issues relating to Māori heritage places.

Statutory advocacy in support of whānau, hapū and iwi on RMA-related matters is an important aspect of Heritage New Zealand's role. This is particularly so through the work of the Council, in promoting positive heritage outcomes and supporting the heritage aspirations of Māori communities. This type of assistance also stems from Heritage New Zealand's Treaty commitments and partnerships with whānau, hapū and iwi.

Heritage New Zealand's staff provide heritage advice and assistance to whānau, hapū and iwi on a range of RMA initiatives. They can and do play an important mediation role in RMA issues amongst competing hapū or iwi or amongst various parties with disputes concerning Māori heritage issues before the Environment Court. Heritage New Zealand values the reputation of ‘honest broker’ in these circumstances.

When RMA processes potentially or actually impact on Māori heritage places or areas on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero, Heritage New Zealand staff have to become involved. While addressing the heritage issues involved, staff members as a matter of course will support and promote the values and associations that underpin the original entry of the place or area on the New Zealand Heritage List/Rārangi Kōrero. Heritage New Zealand staff are experts in various fields relevant to heritage and the RMA, and are regularly called upon to give evidence at hearings or before the Environment Court. Often the evidence provided directly supports a hapū or iwi position on a matter and is prepared in close conjunction with hapū or iwi.

In its statutory advocacy work, Heritage New Zealand is always careful to promote positive heritage outcomes. It maintains a heritage-focused but neutral approach, even when taking a position that outwardly may reinforce a hapū or iwi viewpoint. This is important to Heritage New Zealand's credibility because it is regarded as an expert and respected advisor on heritage matters.

Māori built heritage

Māori built heritage is an important part of New Zealand's heritage. Wharenui, wharekai, wharekarakia, pātaka, pou haki, tohu whakamaumaharatanga, and waka are unique expressions of Māori and New Zealand's cultural identity. The Council recognises the unique relationship between Māori built heritage and Māori communities, not only for the heritage and cultural values they possess, but because they are a necessary part of a cultural continuum that is expressed through art, whakapapa, social function, and spiritual meaning.

The conservation of this heritage provides a number of challenges to advocate for the preservation of cultural identity through the built environment, whilst acknowledging the dynamism of change within the context of a living culture. The Council has, through its Māori Built Heritage programme, encouraged the participation of local communities in the process of conservation to enable specific approaches to be developed and led by those communities. This has successfully enabled the development and transfer of conservation and other related skills amongst community members.

The Council actively promotes the revival of traditional built heritage practices. This work can encompass the identification and research of traditional building and artwork practices, the preparation and harvesting of cultural materials for renewal and repair work, and the development of local expertise to continue these practices as an integral element of the value and uniqueness of these places.

Te Wāriu o te Pouhere Taonga Māori

The Value of Māori Heritage

Te wāriu o te Pouhere Taonga Māori ki ngā Hapori Māori

Ko tā Tapuwae he hāpai i ngā whakaaro whānau, hapū, iwi mō te pouhere.

Ko te whakaaro a ngā hapori he arawairua ō rātou wāhi tuku iho, hoki ai ki ngā tipuna, hoki ai ki āmuri. He ‘tohu mana’ ēnei e noho nei te wairua o te iwi me tōna Māoritanga.

Takoha ai te pouhere Māori ki te tūākiri o ngā hapori Māori – ki te whānau, hapū, iwi; ā, ki ngā tikanga taketake hoki. He whakaara ēnei i te piringa o ngā hapori, ā, i te mutunga iho whakamau ai i te mana Māori, he kawenga whakahīhī, he tikanga motuhake.

Kaitiakitanga

He aronga nui ki te whānau, hapū me te iwi ko te mahi kaitiakitanga he huarahi manaaki i te pouhere Māori i whakatūria i runga i ngā tikanga tūturu, ngā wāriu me te aronga ki te ao hurihuri. Ko te mahi a te kaitiakitanga he rapu me pēhea te tiaki i ngā taonga tuku iho, ā, ka nanao kia ora ake ai ki ngā whakatipuranga heke.

Mātauranga Māori

He kupu tēnei mō ngā kohinga kōrero taketake a ngā iwi me ngā hapū. Ko te mātauranga nei he huanga o te whānaungatanga ki te ao tuturu. Mā te kuhu ki ngā mātauranga Māori, e whai māramatanga ai te tangata ki ngā mōhiotanga, ngā hītori, ngā tikanga a te iwi me te hapū.

Kei te mārama te Heritage New Zealand Pouhere Taonga ki te take me whakauru te mātauranga Māori ki te rāhuitanga me te whakahaeretanga o te pouhere Māori. Ko taua pouhere Māori hoki me kī he whakapuakanga o te mātauranga Māori.

The value of Māori Heritage to Māori communities

Tapuwae aims to support views held by whānau, hapū and iwi about their heritage.

Māori communities regard their heritage places as spiritual links and pathways, arawairua, to ancestors and to the past. These are seen as ‘markers of mana’ in which the spirit (wairua) of the people and Māoritanga reside.

Māori heritage contributes to the identity of Māori communities – whānau, hapū and iwi, and to distinctive cultural behaviours (tikanga). These enhance the cohesion of those communities and, ultimately, reinforce the experience of being Māori and having a proud and distinctive heritage.

Kaitiakitanga

Of particular interest to whānau, hapū and iwi is the exercise of kaitiakitanga, a way of caring for Māori heritage based upon traditional perspectives, values and world view (expressed in mātauranga Māori). Kaitiakitanga is a task that seeks to protect Māori heritage and to make it vibrant and available to future generations.

Mātauranga Māori

Mātauranga Māori is a term used to refer to distinctive indigenous and traditional knowledge formulated by iwi and hapū communities. This knowledge arises from a deep indigenous relationship with the natural world. Mātauranga Māori enables people to gain insight into and understanding of iwi and hapū knowledge, history and culture.

Heritage New Zealand recognises the importance of applying mātauranga Māori in the conservation and management of Māori heritage. Māori heritage can be viewed essentially as an expression of mātauranga Māori.

Te wāriu o te Pouhere Taonga ki Aotearoa

Kei te iho o ngā pouhere katoa o Aotearoa ko te pouhere Māori.

Ki te hapori whānui ake, kua kore noa iho he take, he wāriu hoki o te pouhere Māori. Engari ki ngā hapori Māori he taonga hei pupuri, hei tiaki.

Ki te Kaunihera Māori he wāriu tō te pouhere Māori, toro atu ai ki Ngā Māori me ngā iwi katoa o Aotearoa. Kei te hiahia te Kaunihera, kia wetea te tū mokemoke o te pouhere Māori, ā, ka whakatuwhera i ōna painga me tōna wāriu ki Aotearoa whānui.

The value of Māori heritage to New Zealand

Māori heritage is foundational and central to all New Zealand heritage.

Māori heritage has largely been underestimated and undervalued by wider society. For Māori communities, it is a precious heirloom to be preserved and protected.

The Māori Heritage Council believes that Māori heritage is of value both to Māori and to New Zealand as a whole. The Council wishes to replace the sense of isolation of Māori heritage as a sideline of the nation's life, culture and consciousness with an understanding of its value to New Zealand overall.

Tihei mauri ora!

With Tapuwae, the Māori Heritage Council seeks to:

- support the exercise of kaitiakianga by whānau, hapū and iwi with respect to their heritage places – building the capacity and capability of whānau, hapū and iwi to be kaitiaki of their heritage places where it is their desire to do so
- increase the value that New Zealanders ascribe to Māori heritage places, so that Māori heritage is seen as a taonga (treasure) of our nation as a whole
- protect and enhance places of Māori heritage by:
 - protecting the physical places themselves
 - supporting the maintenance of knowledge and kōrero about those places
 - developing and encouraging appropriate interactions with Māori heritage places leading to an increased consciousness, and appreciation of those places
- develop an understanding of the potential contribution of places of Māori heritage to health and well-being, and to culture and identity.

In outlining a vision for Māori heritage, Heritage New Zealand Pouhere Taonga hopes to lay down a platform for honouring the mana of the past and enriching the lives of current and future generations through the active treasuring of heritage places, buildings and structures that are important to Māori.
